THE STORY

Background and History...

Soon after opening its New York flagship in 1980, Warwick International Hotels opened its Parisian counterpart in the same year, the Warwick Champs-Elysées located just off arguably one of the most famous avenues in the world.

An emblematic establishment of the Big Apple since 1926, The Warwick Hotel New York was built and made famous by William Randolph Hearst - an American businessman and media tycoon in the early twentieth century - for the love of his life, the Hollywood actress Marion Davies. Since then, the hotel continues to host famous celebrities and has inevitably become a mythical icon in Manhattan, synonymous with New York glamour and understated indulgence.

Other hotels soon followed: in Europe, the Royal Windsor Hotel in Brussels overlooking The Grand Place; the renowned Hotel Westminster on Rue de la Paix in Paris - the former residence of the Duke of Westminster - between Opera Garnier and Place Vendome and Warwick Geneva which boasts magnificent views of Mont Blanc.

Across the Atlantic, during the same period, WIH also saw Warwick Seattle and Warwick Denver join its collection. Concurrently, resorts were being added to The Collection in the Pacific. The success of its first resort, The Warwick Fiji Resort & Spa, encouraged the growth of additional resorts within The Collection.

Since then, the Collection has continued to grow around the world in major key destinations and entered new markets such as the Middle East.
